

Challenges:

Being able to influence sustainability within the supply chain is a key challenge. An initial challenge is ensuring sustainability is embedded within the company and its people. There have been introductory steps to gain an understanding of what sustainability means and how it impacts the business. It is the hope that, through utilising Supply Chain School, the company can start to influence their supply chain, encourage change and drive sustainability.

Impact:

Blok’N’Mesh have engaged in the School through using the assessments and bespoke action plans with its related online resources. Using these tools the business has had the following impacts:

- Improved knowledge: Through completing the assessments the company has been able to identify opportunities to increase knowledge within individuals and the company as a whole.
- Implementing change: After engaging in the learning provided by the School, especially the Fairness, Inclusion and Respect modules, Blok ‘N’ Mesh are more focused on the welfare of each individual encouraging them to come forward and speak to Mental Health First Aiders.
- Increased focus: With sustainability being at the forefront of a large majority of businesses that Blok’N’Mesh work with, the knowledge absorbed from the schools resources is invaluable in pushing the company forward in making effective and meaningful change.

Value gained:

- Networking and collaboration: The School is a platform for engaging with other members and Partners who have a common goal and provides a discussion point to facilitate networking. Blok’N’Mesh found that attending the School’s networking events gave a platform to collaboratively promote sustainability.
